1. Introduction

This document provides guidance which outlines how staff can raise a concern in Public Health Wales and provides specific information for Managers, Senior Managers, Executive Directors and the Trust Chair to help them deal with a concern raised under the Procedure for NHS Staff to Raise Concerns (AW09).

The Flowchart in Figure 1 (page 4) provides an overview of the route(s) through which a concern can progress in the organisation.

Pages 5-12 provides clarification regarding the steps to be taken when a concern is raised, together with further information for some of the areas captured within the All Wales procedure, for example training.

Appendix 1 (pages 13-20) contains a series of easy to follow action cards for key individuals responsible for taking a concern forward in Public Health Wales.

The aim of the Procedure and this supporting Guidance is to provide an effective process for serious concerns to be raised. If it is concluded that an individual has deliberately made false allegations maliciously or for personal gain, an investigation will be undertaken into the matter in accordance with the Disciplinary Policy and Procedure (see also page 11 of the Procedure for NHS Staff to Raise Concerns).

Further information regarding whether or not a “concern” should be raised under the procedure can be found here [provide link to intranet page]. Further advice can also be provided by the Board Secretary and Head of Corporate Governance or a member of the People Team.

- No
  - Individual may refer externally to a ‘prescribed person’ in the case of serious or continued concerns

Note – Staff may move to Stage 2 and 3 without going through the earlier stage if they do not feel comfortable raising a concern with their manager. Before moving to Stage 4 (external) staff should refer to Appendix 2 of the NHS Wales Procedure to ensure that they have the appropriate protection.
2. Taking the Concern Forward – Stage 1 (Informal)

2.1 Initial response to a concern being raised

A member of staff may raise a concern informally with a manager (Stage 1). In response, the manager should arrange a meeting as soon as possible with the individual who has raised the concern.

The aim of this meeting is to gather more information about the issue to enable the manager to decide whether the concern falls under the Procedure for NHS Staff to Raise Concerns or another organisational policy, e.g. the Safeguarding Policy, Grievance Policy.

Ideally, the meeting should be arranged within two working days of the concern being raised. However, different operational circumstances such as shift-working and part-time working, will need to be taken into account. If there is a delay in meeting, this should be with the agreement of the person who has raised the concern.

In some cases, it may be possible to tell from the initial discussions that the concern does not fall under the Procedure for NHS Staff to Raise Concerns. If this is the case, there is no need to arrange a meeting. However, the manager should explain why the matter does not fall under the procedure and advise of the appropriate route if applicable.

If the manager is unsure at any stage they should contact their line manager, the Board Secretary and Head of Corporate Governance or the People Team for advice.

Confidentiality

If the member of staff has requested confidentiality, it is necessary to respect this as far as possible. Individuals who have disclosed a concern are protected by law and are due the highest standards of confidentiality.

However, if the situation arises where it is not possible to resolve the concern without revealing the employee’s identity beyond a ‘need to know basis’, (for example in matters of criminal law), the manager must advise the member of staff before proceeding.
The manager should seek to ensure the same degree of confidentiality be afforded to the member(s) of staff at the centre of the concern.

For further information, see Procedure for NHS Staff to Raise Concerns, Appendix 2, pp. 17-18.

Anonymous concerns

A member of staff can raise concerns anonymously if they choose to do so. The concern must be treated as credible and investigated. However, it is recognised that anonymous concerns may be more difficult to investigate and that any investigation may be limited as a consequence. In such cases, managers should follow the steps in this guidance as far as possible.

Public Health Wales encourages staff to come forward without any threat of recrimination.

Record-keeping

At all stages, a contemporaneous written record of any concern raised should be kept and the action taken regardless of whether the concern is accepted under the Procedure for NHS Staff to Raise Concerns.

As a minimum, it is advised that the following is captured:

- date the issue was raised.
- the outcome, including how the issue was resolved and by whom.
- how long the process took.
- whether the individual has requested confidentiality or not.
- any other relevant details.

Managers may wish to use Form WB1 – Recording a concern raised under the procedure (see Procedure for NHS Staff to Raise Concerns, Appendix 3, pp. 19-20), although this is only a requirement for formal concerns raised (Stage 2).

All records should be maintained confidentially, in accordance with the organisation’s information governance policies and procedures, and the Data Protection Act 2018 and the General Data Protection Regulations 2018.
2.2 Holding a meeting with the individual who has raised a concern

Step One: Before the meeting

The manager may wish to consider whether the individual feels uncomfortable meeting face-to-face. In such cases the manager can arrange a convenient time to speak over the telephone.

The manager may want to consider whether there are any reasonable adjustments that should be made to facilitate the meeting, with due consideration of the sensitivities of the concern. Welsh language considerations should also be considered.

The individual raising the concern may also wish to seek advice from a Trade Union and may wish a representative to accompany them. The manager should be informed in advance if a representative will be at the meeting.

Step Two: The meeting

This informal meeting is the opportunity for the manager to gain a fuller outline of the concern.

When meeting the manager should ensure they:

- thank the employee for raising the matter, even if the concern proves to be mistaken.
- recognise that this may be a troubling time for them and establish a supportive relationship.
- remind them that it is the organisation’s position to support and protect those who have raised a concern.
- reassure them that they are being listened to and taken seriously.
- use open body language and an appropriate tone of voice.
- ask open questions.
- respect any concerns about their own position/career.
- avoid giving any unrealistic promises or raising expectations.

The manager should record all of the main points from the discussion. They might want to re-phrase as necessary to ensure that they have understood and agreed the issues. It is also helpful to determine how the individual considers the matter might be best resolved.

The manager is not required to commit to anything during the meeting. They must listen carefully and ask the member of staff questions that will assist them in reaching a decision.
Step Three: After the Meeting

If the matter does not fall under the Procedure for NHS Staff to Raise Concerns, it should be explained to the individual, either by telephone or face to face, the reason why this is and whether or not there is a more appropriate process within the Trust.

If greater detail needs to be conveyed, it may be more appropriate to provide a written response, provided that the individual has not wished to remain anonymous.

There may be situations where it is difficult to determine how significant a concern is. If this is the case, it would be prudent to pass it on to a more senior manager in the organisation, with the consensus of the individual.

2.3 Local investigation
The Manager may be able to undertake an informal, local investigation to resolve the issue raised. Again, records of any meetings and correspondence with staff must be kept and stored securely at a local level.

2.4 Unresolved concerns
If, having followed the process outlined in Stage 1, the individual’s concerns remain, or that they feel that the matter is so serious that it cannot be resolved at this level, then they can move on to use the more formal steps outlined in Stage 2.

3. Taking the Concern Forward – Stage 2 (Formal)

The manager should inform the individual who has raised the concern that they should make their concerns known to a senior manager, and that they may also wish to involve their Trade Union/Staff Representative. The manager with whom the concern was initially raised should continue to support the individual employee if appropriate.

Once the concern has been referred to Stage 2, the manager should ensure that the senior manager is provided with the information gathered throughout Stage 1. The senior manager should then report any formal concern to the Board Secretary. This will be recorded in the corporate concerns register.
The manager who received the original concern may be contacted by the senior manager to provide further information and/or evidence.

The senior manager will meet with the individual raising the concern within seven working days. The outcome of the meeting will be recorded in writing and a copy given to the individual within seven working days of the meeting, accompanied by a formal letter.

Form WB1 – Recording a concern raised under the procedure should be completed once the concern has been formally received (see Procedure for NHS Staff to Raise Concerns, Appendix 3, pp. 19-20). A copy of this form should then be transferred to the Board Secretary where it will held securely.

The senior manager, in conjunction with appropriate colleagues, will consider the information to identify what action should be taken. This may involve an informal review or a more formal investigation.

The senior manager will inform the staff member who raised the concern, who is handling the matter, how they can be contacted and what further assistance may be needed.

If there is to be a formal investigation the senior manager will appoint an Investigating Officer. If an internal investigation takes place this will be undertaken thoroughly and completed as quickly as possible (usually within 28 days) in light of the matters to be investigated. At their request, the individual will be written to summarising their concern, and setting out how it will be handled along with a timeframe, agreed with the staff member (who raised the concern).

The Investigating Officer will conduct the investigation as appropriate. This may include witness interviews and an examination of documents/records and correspondence.

The senior manager will aim to keep the individual informed of the progress of the investigation.

However, sometimes the need for confidentiality may prevent specific details of the investigation, such as disciplinary action, from being disclosed. All information about the investigation should be treated as confidential.

Form WB2 Concerns Raised Under the Procedure: Summary of findings and outcome of investigation should be completed by the Investigating Officer (see Procedure for NHS Staff to Raise Concerns, Appendix 4, pp. 21-22) and submitted to the senior manager in addition to any other feedback. A copy of this form should then be transferred to the Board Secretary where it will be held securely.

Subject to any legal constraints, the senior manager will inform the individual who raised the concern, of the outcome of the investigation via a formal letter with an outline of any actions taken.

4. Taking the Concern Forward – Stage 3 (Senior Manager)

If an individual is either dissatisfied with a decision to only undertake an informal review, or is dissatisfied with the outcome of Stage 2 through the mechanisms outlined previously, they may raise their concerns in writing with the Chief Executive, and/or an appropriate Executive Director.

If the concern relates to the Chief Executive or Executive Director, concerns should be raised with the Chair. Exceptionally, an individual should proceed directly to this stage in the unlikely event that having made every attempt to raise a concern through the mechanisms outlined previously there has been little or no attempt to address the matter.

If a concern has been raised with them, the Chief Executive, Executive Director, the Chair (or a nominated representative not previously involved) will meet the individual within 28 working days. Again, the outcome of this meeting will be recorded in writing and a copy given to the individual within seven working days of the meeting, accompanied by a formal letter.

If required, a further investigation should be undertaken.

5. The Board Champion

If the individual does not feel comfortable in raising a concern with a line manager, they may also report any concerns to a designated member of the Board – the ‘Board Champion’ – at any time.

The Board Champion should support the individual, maintain records and seek advice as appropriate.

The current Board Champion is:
The Board Champion should also report that a concern has been raised to the Board Secretary so that it can be recorded and to access support as required.

6. Taking the Concern Forward – Stage 4 (External)

In most cases individuals should not find it necessary to alert external parties.

However, the law recognises that in some circumstances it may be appropriate to report concerns to an external body, e.g. a regulator or the independent charity, Public Concern at Work.

If the individual pursues this course of action, the Chief Executive and Board Secretary, will lead the organisational response, seeking legal advice as appropriate.

7. Audit and Review

As this guidance is a new organisational control document in support of the All Wales procedure, it will be subject to review one year from the point of approval. The Board Secretary will consider the effectiveness of the procedure and its guidance as part of a wider audit of the effectiveness of the revised raising concerns arrangements which have been put in place. This will include an annual collation of the number of concerns raised across the organisation.

Review of the effectiveness will also include analysing the number of concerns raised together with the Quality, Nursing and Allied Health Professionals and the People and Organisational Development Directorates to identify any trends in reporting across the potential sources, for example, incident reporting.
8. Training

This guidance will be made available on the staff intranet on specifically developed pages. Awareness of this guidance will be raised with key individuals across the organisation and will form part of a wider communications initiative for raising concerns. Awareness will also be included at staff induction.

The investigation of concerns in line with the Raising Concerns Procedure will be incorporated into Investigations training for designated managers, delivered by People and Organisational Development from September 2018.
