

Tell us how you are doing!

Please tell us how you are doing by completing a short communications and wellbeing survey.

Public Health Wales is committed to looking after the wellbeing of all staff and ensuring that we are communicating with everyone at the right time and in the right ways so staff feel connected and well-informed to do their job.

Therefore, we've produced a short survey for you to complete. The survey covers questions on the effectiveness of our staff communications during the lockdown period as well as the resources provided to keep you well and your working practice.

The survey is anonymous, unless you choose to add your work email address, and we'll look at your answers from an organisational and directorate/ divisional point of view.

Rhiannon Beaumont-Wood, Strategic Director said; "The wellbeing of our staff is extremely important and during these unusual times we want to understand how staff are feeling, how they are keeping connected and what we could do differently to help them.

"I'm asking everyone to complete the survey so we can get a picture of what is working and what tools need to be further refined.

"Please help us to understand how you are feeling, what is working and what support you need from us."

When starting on the survey, you will be asked to include select your directorate, division and the region of Wales in which you're based. You may also add your email address if you choose, or if you would like to us to contact you about a response. Unless you leave your email address and want to be contacted, results will be completely anonymous.

The survey will be open until 14 May and results will be shared with the Executive Team and staff at the end of May.
